Early Childhood Summit at ECU

PBS North Carolina announces that its third annual Impact Early Childhood Education Summit will be held Saturday, June 1, at East Carolina University (ECU) in Greenville.

This full-day conference welcomes educators, childcare providers, parents and caregivers from across the state for inspiring sessions in areas like literacy, STEM and social-emotional learning. Educators can earn professional credit hours for attending.

Registration is open through May 10.

The Impact Summit is designed to support and celebrate those who nurture learners in their pivotal early years (birth to grade three). Attendees will experience a robust agenda of presentations and networking opportunities.

They can choose from dozens of breakout sessions on a range of topics, including PBS LearningMedia, literacy, nature play, mental health, arts integration, family engagement and more.

View the full schedule, including descriptions and presenters for all breakout sessions, at pbsnc.org/ImpactSummit.
